Britain is considering legalizing the use of low-power FM transmitters for MP3 players.

Currently, the transmitters are not allowed in the country or in Europe due to the possibility of interference with broadcast services.

But Britain's Office of Communications said that there is growing consumer demand for the transmitters to be used for MP3 players, and it is pushing the European Union to develop a harmonized approach to their use by late autumn.

Copyright 2006 by United Press International

Citation: Britain for allowing transmitters for MP3s (2006, July 14) retrieved 26 November 2023 from https://phys.org/news/2006-07-britain-transmitters-mp3s.html

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.