

Judge sides with environmentalists in wolf case

April 3 2009, By SUSAN MONTOYA BRYAN , Associated Press
Writer

(AP) -- A federal judge says a lawsuit by environmental groups to keep the government from aggressively removing endangered Mexican gray wolves that have attacked livestock can move forward.

U.S. District Judge David Bury this week rejected a motion by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to throw out the case filed nearly a year ago by several conservation organizations.

The government began reintroducing Mexican wolves to the Southwest in 1998 in a 4 million acre territory along the Arizona-New Mexico line. A survey last year found 52 wolves scattered between the two states.

The plaintiffs are challenging a "three strikes" rule that calls for wolves to be removed from the wild or killed if they prey on livestock more than twice a year.

On the Net:

Mexican Gray Wolf Recovery: <http://sn.im/f50ov>

©2009 The Associated Press. All rights reserved. This material may not be published, broadcast, rewritten or redistributed.

Citation: Judge sides with environmentalists in wolf case (2009, April 3) retrieved 27 April 2024 from <https://phys.org/news/2009-04-sides-environmentalists-wolf-case.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.