

Roku Internet video box adds live baseball feed

August 13 2009

---

(AP) -- Roku says its pioneering Internet video set-top box is adding its first live feed, from Major League Baseball.

The move brings the $100 Player closer to duplicating the benefits of a cable subscription.

It comes with a remote and connects to a TV set, linking it to the Internet. When it launched last year, it played only streaming movies from Netflix Inc. It later added Amazon.com Inc.'s movie rentals.

On Thursday, Saratoga, Calif.-based Roku Inc. said MLB.com's Premium subscribers will be able to watch out-of-market games live, and local or other nationally televised games about 90 minutes after they end.

MLB's Premium subscribers have already been able to watch those games on a computer. There's also an iPhone application for the service. Membership costs $35 a year.

©2009 The Associated Press. All rights reserved. This material may not be published, broadcast, rewritten or redistributed.

Citation: Roku Internet video box adds live baseball feed (2009, August 13) retrieved 25 April 2024 from <https://phys.org/news/2009-08-roku-internet-video-baseball.html>

---

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.