

Now Tweeting: White House press secretary Gibbs

February 14 2010

White House Press Secretary Robert Gibbs gestures during his daily press briefing at the White House in Washington, Friday, Feb. 12, 2010. (AP Photo/Pablo Martinez Monsivais)

(AP) -- White House press secretary Robert Gibbs has a new way to communicate directly to people - Twitter.

President Barack Obama's chief spokesman ventured into the Twitter world on Saturday with his first 'tweet' or Twitter message on his official White House account. Gibbs wrote: "Learning about 'the twitter' - easing into this with first tweet - any tips?"

Gibbs later told The Associated Press: "I opened it today. I was watching a twitter feed while the President visited the briefing room last week." He said he "thought it was fascinating to watch and see what people were thinking, doing and writing." Gibbs was referring to Obama visiting the press room Tuesday after a bipartisan meeting with leaders of Congress.

Gibbs wrote: "Seemed like adding our voice to that is a good thing."

The press secretary had lured more than 6,200 followers Saturday within hours of that first post.

But fellow Tweeters be forewarned. Because Gibbs' account was set up through the White House, his Twitter page notes that comments and messages received through such pages are subject to the Presidential Records Act and may be archived.

A Gibbs colleague, deputy press secretary Bill Burton, has long been active on Twitter.

This is one more way for White House officials to get their message directly to people. People can already sign up on the White House Web site to get messages straight from top administration officials. Also, Obama did a YouTube interview a couple of weeks ago and is ramping up his town hall meetings.

©2010 The Associated Press. All rights reserved. This material may not be published, broadcast, rewritten or redistributed.

Citation: Now Tweeting: White House press secretary Gibbs (2010, February 14) retrieved 24 April 2024 from <https://phys.org/news/2010-02-tweeting-white-house-secretary-gibbs.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.