

24 hours of video uploaded to YouTube every minute

March 17 2010

YouTube said Wednesday that 24 hours worth of video are being uploaded to the video-sharing site every minute.

YouTube said Wednesday that 24 hours worth of video are being uploaded to the video-sharing site every minute.

"What's next? 30 hours? 36 hours?" YouTube director of product management Hunter Walk said in a blog post.

"A day's worth of content uploaded to YouTube every minute is a big achievement for our community and speaks to the role video plays in connecting and changing the world one upload at a time," Walker said.

Google-owned YouTube announced in May that 20 hours of video were being uploaded to the site every minute, up from 15 hours in January.

In mid-2007, six hours of video were being uploaded to YouTube every minute, according to the site.

Google bought YouTube in 2006 for 1.65 billion dollars but the Mountain View, California-based Internet search and advertising giant has not yet managed to turn a profit with the site despite its massive global popularity.

YouTube has been gradually adding professional content such as full-length television shows and movies to its vast trove of amateur video offerings in a bid to attract advertisers.

(c) 2010 AFP

Citation: 24 hours of video uploaded to YouTube every minute (2010, March 17) retrieved 2 May 2024 from <https://phys.org/news/2010-03-hours-video-uploaded-youtube-minute.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.