

YouTube's 'Life in a Day' project nets 80K entries

August 5 2010

(AP) -- YouTube's "Life in a Day" project has logged 80,000 video submissions as it moves closer to the finished product: a documentary film.

Director Kevin Macdonald said Thursday the 4,600 hours of footage will soon be distilled to 100 hours. A final, feature-length film will premiere in January at the Sundance Film Festival and on the YouTube website.

By last weekend's deadline, user contributions had been received from 197 countries in 45 languages.

The submissions will be available for viewing when the gallery goes live next month on YouTube's "Life in a Day" channel.

"Life in a Day" is an experiment aimed at capturing life globally on a single day, July 24.

Macdonald has directed features including "Last King of Scotland."

More information: <http://www.youtube.com/lifeinaday>

©2010 The Associated Press. All rights reserved. This material may not be published, broadcast, rewritten or redistributed.

Citation: YouTube's 'Life in a Day' project nets 80K entries (2010, August 5) retrieved 26 April

2024 from <https://phys.org/news/2010-08-youtube-life-day-nets-80k.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.