

Oracle to pay $46 mln to settle Sun case

January 31 2011

---

The Oracle logo is displayed on the company's world headquarters in 2009 in California. Oracle has agreed to pay $46 million to settle claims that Sun Microsystems, which it acquired last year, submitted false claims to US agencies, the US Justice Department said on Monday.

Oracle has agreed to pay $46 million to settle claims that Sun Microsystems, which it acquired last year, submitted false claims to US agencies, the US Justice Department said on Monday.

The settlement stems from allegations that Sun paid kickbacks to systems integrator companies in return for recommendations that US government agencies purchase Sun products, the department said in a statement.

"Sun executed agreements with consulting companies that provided for the payment of fees each time the companies influenced a government agency to purchase a Sun product," it said.

"Kickbacks, illegal inducements, misrepresentations during contract negotiations -- these undermine the integrity of the government procurement process and unnecessarily cost taxpayers money," assistant attorney general Tony West said.

"As this case demonstrates, we will take action against those who abuse the public contracting process," he said.

The Justice Department said its ongoing investigation of government technology vendors has resulted in settlements with six other companies.

Oracle acquired Sun, a one-time Silicon Valley star and developer of the popular Java programming language, in a $7.4 billion deal last year.

(c) 2011 AFP

Citation: Oracle to pay $46 mln to settle Sun case (2011, January 31) retrieved 24 May 2024 from <https://phys.org/news/2011-01-oracle-mln-sun-case.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.
---