

Some tribes seek federal rules on Internet gaming

July 26 2012, by SUZANNE GAMBOA

(AP) — Some Native American tribal leaders are calling on the federal government to regulate online gambling as it did with brick-and-mortar gambling to ensure they are not kept from launching their own games.

The tribal leaders also say federal regulation can better protect their sovereignty and ensure their revenues are not taxed. Tribal leaders and gaming officials are testifying on the issue at a Senate Indian Affairs Committee hearing Thursday.

A new set of regulations is unlikely this year with so little getting through Congress. But momentum is building in some states for online gambling enterprises to be launched soon.

The Justice Department in December ruled that not all online gambling is banned under federal law, and a few states have been working to allow gambling and approve licenses.

Copyright 2012 The Associated Press. All rights reserved. This material may not be published, broadcast, rewritten or redistributed.

Citation: Some tribes seek federal rules on Internet gaming (2012, July 26) retrieved 9 April 2024 from <https://phys.org/news/2012-07-tribes-federal-internet-gaming.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.
--