

Judge: Kim Dotcom can review US case against him

August 16 2012

(AP) - A New Zealand judge has upheld a ruling that allows Kim Dotcom to review details of the U.S. federal case against him ahead of an extradition hearing.

Dotcom, the co-founder of file-sharing website Megaupload, is accused by U.S. prosecutors of racketeering and money laundering by facilitating millions of illegal downloads of copyrighted material on his site. Dotcom says he cannot be held responsible for those who chose to make illegal downloads on his site.

An extradition hearing has been scheduled for March.

Dotcom had sought to examine documents in the case against him, while U.S. prosecutors argued discovery should be narrowly limited at the hearing.

In upholding the ruling Thursday, Judge Helen Winklemann said disclosing the documents would help encourage a fair hearing, which she said could still remain focused.

Copyright 2012 The Associated Press. All rights reserved. This material may not be published, broadcast, rewritten or redistributed.

Citation: Judge: Kim Dotcom can review US case against him (2012, August 16) retrieved 1 April 2023 from <https://phys.org/news/2012-08-kim-dotcom-case.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.