

NY appeals court skeptical about startup's live TV

November 30 2012, by Larry Neumeister

(AP)—A New York federal appeals panel has found weaknesses with a startup company's arguments it can legally send live TV programming to iPhones and other mobile devices.

Three judges of the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals seemed poised Friday to reverse a lower court judge who in July reluctantly gave a thumbs-up to the company, Aereo (EHR'-ee-oh).

The appeals judges appeared to belittle the company's business model during an hour of arguments.

An Aereo Inc. lawyer told the court the business model allows the company to comply with federal copyright laws.

Aereo lets customers capture over-the-air broadcasts for viewing on iPhones, iPads and computers for $12 a month.

A copyright infringement lawsuit was filed by Fox, ABC, CBS, NBC and others, accusing Aereo of copying and retransmitting their programming over the Internet unlawfully.

Copyright 2012 The Associated Press. All rights reserved. This material may not be published, broadcast, rewritten or redistributed.

Citation: NY appeals court skeptical about startup's live TV (2012, November 30) retrieved 13 March 2024 from <https://phys.org/news/2012-11-ny-appeals-court-skeptical-startup.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.