

Facebook to unveil new look for news feed

March 4 2013, by Salvador Rodriguez

Facebook has sent out invitations to a media event next Thursday at which it'll showcase a new look for the social network's news feed.

The invitation doesn't say much more than "Come see a new look for News Feed," but the event is set for the company's Menlo Park, Calif., campus.

Although Facebook has made drastic changes to its profile pages and search feature in recent years, it has left the news feed largely untouched for some time.

In January, Facebook held another event at which it announced Graph Search, a large overhaul of its search feature.

Graph Search, which has been rolled out to some English-speaking users, lets users search for information on the social network based on people's "likes," information, posted content and their interests.

(c)2013 Los Angeles Times

Distributed by MCT Information Services

Citation: Facebook to unveil new look for news feed (2013, March 4) retrieved 22 May 2024 from <https://phys.org/news/2013-03-facebook-unveil-news.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.
--