

Weekend heat wave to bake western US

June 28 2013, by Brian Skoloff

(AP)—Tigers at the Phoenix Zoo are getting frozen fish snacks. Temporary cooling stations are popping up. And airlines are monitoring the soaring temperatures as the western U.S. falls into the grips of a dangerous heat wave.

A strong high-pressure system settling over the region Friday and through the weekend will bring extreme temperatures even to the typically blazing Southwest.

Death Valley in California is forecast to reach 129 degrees, not far off the world-record high of 134 logged there in 1913.

Temperatures are expected to soar even as far north as Reno, Nev., across Utah and into parts of Wyoming and Idaho, where forecasters are calling for triple-digit heat in the Boise area through the weekend.

© 2013 The Associated Press. All rights reserved.

Citation: Weekend heat wave to bake western US (2013, June 28) retrieved 9 April 2024 from <https://phys.org/news/2013-06-weekend-western.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.
--