

Toshiba swings to profit as devices sell well

July 31 2013

---

A Toshiba employee unveils a Dynabook AZ laptop at a Tokyo hotel. Japan's Toshiba on Wednesday reported $54 mn in net profit for the April-June quarter, reversing a quarterly loss a year earlier, thanks to a weak yen and brisk sales of electronic devices.

Japan's Toshiba on Wednesday reported $54 million in net profit for the April-June quarter, reversing a quarterly loss a year earlier, thanks to a weak yen and brisk sales of electronic devices.

The technology and engineering conglomerate said it earned 5.3 billion yen in net profit for the three months, compared with 12.1 billion yen in net loss a year before.

Operating profit more than doubled to 24.3 billion yen on sales of 1.39 trillion yen, up 9.6 percent from the same period last year.

The profit gain for the quarter was mainly due to "significant growth in the electronic devices segment and yen depreciation," the company said in a statement.

A sharp decline in the yen has helped many Japanese firms, making them more competitive overseas and boosting the value of repatriated foreign income, which inflates their bottom line.

But Toshiba said its televisions and other digital products stumbled, with electronics manufacturers worldwide facing fierce competition.

Toshiba left its full-year forecast unchanged, projecting a net profit of 100 billion yen on sales of 6.1 trillion yen for the year to March 2014.

© 2013 AFP

Citation: Toshiba swings to profit as devices sell well (2013, July 31) retrieved 26 January 2023 from <https://phys.org/news/2013-07-toshiba-profit-devices.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.