

French court orders Google to block Max Mosley orgy pictures

November 6 2013

Former FIA chairman Max Mosley speaks to the press in central London on November 29, 2012

A French court on Wednesday ordered Google to prevent its search engine from providing links to images of a sadomasochist orgy involving former Formula One boss Max Mosley.

Google had strongly opposed Mosley's request, arguing that it would set a dangerous legal precedent for censorship of the internet.

The landmark ruling relates to nine widely circulated images taken from a video of the orgy that was filmed by Britain's now defunct News of the World.
