

German court to rule on Apple lawsuit end-February

February 11 2014

People are seen during the opening of the first "Apple" store in Berlin at the Kurfuerstendamm on May 3, 2013

A German court said Tuesday it will issue its verdict on a copyright violation lawsuit against US tech giant Apple by a German firm at the end of the month.

"The verdict will be issued on February 28," a court spokesman told

AFP.

German patent-holding company ICom is seeking 1.57 billion euros ($2.0 billion) in damages from Apple for allegedly infringing a patent it holds on mobile technology that allows priority access to certain mobile phone calls even when a network is saturated.

ICom acquired the patent from German engineering company Bosch in 2007.

The European Patent Office recently confirmed that ICom owned the patent, which had been contested by several firms.

© 2014 AFP

Citation: German court to rule on Apple lawsuit end-February (2014, February 11) retrieved 24 May 2024 from <https://phys.org/news/2014-02-german-court-apple-lawsuit-end-february.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.
--