

Utah judge rules against Aereo in copyright fight

February 19 2014

A Utah judge has blocked TV streaming company Aereo from operating in several Western states until the U.S. Supreme Court takes up a related case in April.

Broadcasters have argued Aereo is stealing TV signals without paying. Aereo says its tiny antennas should be treated the same as antennas that people use to pull TV signals for free.

District Judge Dale Kimball, who ruled Wednesday, argued that Aereo's service is indistinguishable from that of a cable company. His ruling applies to a district that covers Oklahoma, Kansas, New Mexico, Colorado, Wyoming, Utah and parts of Montana and Idaho.

Fox, the broadcaster owned by Twenty-First Century Fox Inc., calls the ruling a significant win, while Aereo CEO Chet Kanojia says he is disappointed.

© 2014 The Associated Press. All rights reserved.

Citation: Utah judge rules against Aereo in copyright fight (2014, February 19) retrieved 24 May 2024 from <https://phys.org/news/2014-02-utah-aereo-copyright.html>

| |
|--|
| This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only. |
|--|