

NYC transit agency has data breach

March 13 2014, by Bree Fowler

The personal information of approximately 15,000 New York City Transit Authority workers has been found on a compact disc inside a refurbished computer sold by a retailer.

Authorities are investigating how the CD found its way into the computer drive.

The Associated Press obtained a letter about the security breach from one of the affected employees.

The letter dated March 6 says there is no immediate indication that any of the information on the CD was copied. It says the New York Police Department is investigating.

An authority spokesman referred a reporter to the content of the letter for comment. It described the breach as a "singular event."

Employees and retirees have been told they are being provided with a year of free credit monitoring.

© 2014 The Associated Press. All rights reserved.

Citation: NYC transit agency has data breach (2014, March 13) retrieved 2 May 2024 from <https://phys.org/news/2014-03-nyc-transit-agency-breach.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.
