

Twitter clues lead to @HiddenCash in San Francisco

May 28 2014

---

A cyclist rides past the Twitter headquarters in San Francisco on October 25, 2013

Tweets are turning golden in San Francisco, thanks to an anonymous Twitter user hiding cash and then firing off clues as to where to find the loot.

More than $5,000 in total has been given away by the person behind @HiddenCash, and word out on Tuesday was that the practice in playful generosity was spreading south to the city of San Jose in the heart of Silicon Valley.

The @HiddenCash account had more than 97,000 followers as of late Tuesday, and the number was climbing as people learned that figuring out sometimes simple hints could lead to payoffs.

"Frankly, a little overwhelmed with requests for media and cash," a post at @HiddenCash said Tuesday.

"It hasn't even been a week. Wow."

Time magazine identified @HiddenCash as someone who made a bundle in real estate and set out to "put smiles on people's faces" by giving a bit back to folks not as well off.

In the Time interview, the anonymous person behind @HiddenCash called on other 'haves' to be a bit more generous when it comes to giving back.

He also advised those less well off "not to look to @hiddencash or a lottery ticket to be your salvation."

Clues have led people to money stashed in places such as Fisherman's Wharf, The Palace of Fine Arts, and near the base of the Golden Gate Bridge.

"New SF drop: find Mr. Franklin along the 'crookedest street' (towards the bottom)," a clue Tuesday at @HiddenCash said in an apparent reference to a one hundred dollar bill planted on Lombard Street.

In a sign that the acts of random generosity are having ripple effects, people finding cash are 'tweeting' back about treating friends or co-workers to pizza, drinks, shares of the find, and more.

A message at Twitter said to watch for clues to @HiddenCash in the Silicon Valley city of San Jose on Wednesday.

© 2014 AFP

Citation: Twitter clues lead to @HiddenCash in San Francisco (2014, May 28) retrieved 3 May 2024 from <https://phys.org/news/2014-05-twitter-clues-hiddencash-san-francisco.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.
--