

New digital music store to cater to theater fans

June 2 2014, by Mark Kennedy

This screen image provided by BwayTunes.com shows the home page to their new digital theater music site. Monday, June 2, 2014, marks the launch of BwayTunes.com, which promises to become the Internet's most comprehensive catalog of digital musical theater music. (AP Photo/BwayTunes.com)

The digital age virtually wiped out specialty theater record stores where show-tune lovers could browse aisles bursting with cast albums and sheet music. Now some entrepreneurs are hoping to bring back such an experience—online, of course.

Monday marks the launch of BwayTunes.com. The website promises to become the Internet's most comprehensive catalog of digital musical theater music.

The site will have songs, albums, compilations and sheet music on sale, as well as better ways to search for music, access to AccuRadio curated Broadway-dedicated radio channels and blogs. It will even feature music for shows in development.

© 2014 The Associated Press. All rights reserved.

Citation: New digital music store to cater to theater fans (2014, June 2) retrieved 23 April 2024 from <https://phys.org/news/2014-06-digital-music-cater-theater-fans.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.