

German court lifts ban on Uber car pick-up service

September 16 2014

A customer uses an app for the popular car pick-up service Uber in Berlin, in a photo taken on April 24, 2014

The controversial but popular car pick-up service Uber claimed a victory in Germany on Tuesday when a court threw out an injunction levelled against its operations in Europe's biggest economy.

The regional court in Frankfurt ruled that there was no need for an urgent temporary ban against the San Francisco-based firm, which allows passengers to summon cars using an app on their smartphones at prices that significantly undercut rival taxi companies.

The decision means Uber can resume operating legally in Germany, but must await a final ruling on a complaint by the taxi federation as to whether it has the necessary permits to run a business.

© 2014 AFP

Citation: German court lifts ban on Uber car pick-up service (2014, September 16) retrieved 17 July 2024 from <https://phys.org/news/2014-09-german-court-uber-car-pick-up.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.