

BofA to refund Apple Pay customers charged twice

October 22 2014, by Brandon Bailey

---

Bank of America is apologizing for double-billing customers who made purchases using Apple's new mobile payments service.

A bank spokeswoman said Wednesday that the glitch involved about 1,000 transactions and that all duplicate charges will be refunded.

Some customers who used Apple Pay with debit cards issued by Bank of America have complained they were charged twice for a single transaction.

Apple says it was aware of the glitch, which it said affected "a very small number of Apple Pay users." The Cupertino, California-based company has not disclosed how many customers have used Apple Pay since it became available Monday.

© 2014 The Associated Press. All rights reserved.

Citation: BofA to refund Apple Pay customers charged twice (2014, October 22) retrieved 18 April 2024 from <https://phys.org/news/2014-10-bofa-refund-apple-customers.html>

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only. |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|