

JFK New Frontier awards go to mayor, scientist

November 13 2014

The innovative mayor of a central New York city and the founder of a company that empowers scientific research in developing countries have been named recipients of the 2014 John F. Kennedy New Frontier Awards.

Kennedy's grandson, Jack Schlossberg, will present the awards on Dec. 10 to Ithaca, New York, Mayor Svante Myrick and Nina Dudnik, CEO of Seeding Labs.

Myrick, 24 years old when elected in 2011, is credited with spurring economic growth and entrepreneurship in the city.

Dudnik sent research tools that were being discarded in the U.S. to 22 developing nations. She has supported researchers developing treatments for tuberculosis and malaria, expanding access to clean drinking water, improving crops and more.

The awards honor Americans under 40 who are changing the world through public service.

© 2014 The Associated Press. All rights reserved.

Citation: JFK New Frontier awards go to mayor, scientist (2014, November 13) retrieved 25 April 2024 from <https://phys.org/news/2014-11-jfk-frontier-awards-mayor-scientist.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.