

1,000 pages of Clinton emails released; 84 classifications

February 13 2016, by Bradley Klapper

Democratic presidential candidate, Hillary Clinton acknowledges the crowd as she arrives to speak at the state's Democratic-Farmer-Labor (DFL) Humphrey-Mondale dinner, Friday, Feb. 12, 2016, in St. Paul, Minn (AP Photo/Jim Mone)

The State Department has released more than 1,000 new pages of Hillary Clinton's emails.

Eighty-one messages were classified, mostly at the lowest level of sensitivity. None was declared top secret.

The department has now released more than 45,000 pages of emails from the private account Clinton used as secretary of state.

It plans to finish making her emails public on Feb. 29, a day before the critical Super Tuesday primaries.

Clinton has struggled to put the email controversy to rest as she seeks the Democratic presidential nomination.

Last month, 22 emails were withheld in full because they contained "top secret" material. The FBI also is examining the security of the homebrew server she maintained for email use while in office.

© 2016 The Associated Press. All rights reserved.

Citation: 1,000 pages of Clinton emails released; 84 classifications (2016, February 13) retrieved 30 January 2023 from <https://phys.org/news/2016-02-pages-clinton-emails-classifications.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.
--