

Carnegie Science Center gets $7.5M donation for new wing

June 28 2017

The Carnegie Science Center has received its largest gift, a $7.5 million donation from PPG and its corporate foundation for the interactive museum in Pittsburgh.

The gift is part of more than $42.5 million being spent on a new 37,000-square-foot wing that will be known as the PPG Science Pavilion for at least 20 years.

Ann Metzger, who co-directs the science center, says the new wing will enable the museum to host "blockbuster" exhibits the center is now too small to accommodate.

The 36-year-old science center also hopes to create new science, technology, engineering and math—or STEM—programs with the expansion.

© 2017 The Associated Press. All rights reserved.

Citation: Carnegie Science Center gets $7.5M donation for new wing (2017, June 28) retrieved 9 April 2024 from <https://phys.org/news/2017-06-carnegie-science-center-75m-donation.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.
--