

Spain's Iberia scraps pregnancy test after fine

July 10 2017

Spain's Iberia airline has decided to scrap a pregnancy test for new employees after it was fined 25,000 euros ($29,000) by a regional government for discrimination.

The airline said in a statement Monday that the test had been purely a precautionary measure taken in the interest of the baby and future mother, and denied that it rejected pregnant women for jobs.

The decision came after the Balearic Islands' regional labor department fined the company following an inspection last year.

Iberia said it had contracted five pregnant women last year and actively backed a policy of employing women.

© 2017 The Associated Press. All rights reserved.

Citation: Spain's Iberia scraps pregnancy test after fine (2017, July 10) retrieved 18 April 2024 from <https://phys.org/news/2017-07-spain-iberia-scrap-pregnancy-fine.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.
--