

Video: The future of sunscreen begins with cuttlefish

June 27 2019

Credit: CC0 Public Domain

The pigments in the skin of cephalopods, including squid, octopus, and cuttlefish, can absorb ultraviolet radiation.

Researchers in Northeastern's Biomaterials Design Group are studying these animals to find ways to create new, environmentally friendly sunscreen.

Provided by Northeastern University

Citation: Video: The future of sunscreen begins with cuttlefish (2019, June 27) retrieved 3 May 2024 from <https://phys.org/news/2019-06-video-future-sunscreen.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.
--