

Panda twins doing well, gaining weight, says Berlin zoo

September 4 2019

One of the newborn Panda twins is fed milk pumped from its mother, Meng Meng, at Zoo Berlin in Germany, Wednesday, Sept. 4, 2019. The zoo that announced the first ever birth of two giant panda cubs this week says the twins are doing well thanks to the skillful help of a Chinese keeper. (Zoo Berlin/dpa via AP)

A Berlin zoo that announced the first ever birth of two giant panda cubs in Germany this week says the twins are doing well thanks to the skillful help of a Chinese keeper.

Zoo Berlin said Wednesday that both cubs lost weight in the days after their birth, but have now regained most of it again.

The zoo said the older of the cubs born late Saturday "shows great appetite" and is feeding well.

A Chinese keeper is giving the younger cub additional bottles of milk pumped from mother Meng Meng and it has almost reached its birth weight of 136 grams (4.8 ounces) again.

Meng Meng and partner Jiao Qing arrived from China in June 2017.

One of the newborn Panda twins is fed milk pumped from its mother, Meng Meng, at Zoo Berlin in Germany, Wednesday, Sept. 4, 2019. The zoo that announced the first ever birth of two giant panda cubs this week says the twins are doing well thanks to the skillful help of a Chinese keeper. (Zoo Berlin/dpa via AP)

© 2019 The Associated Press. All rights reserved.

Citation: Panda twins doing well, gaining weight, says Berlin zoo (2019, September 4) retrieved 17 July 2024 from <https://phys.org/news/2019-09-panda-twins-gaining-weight-berlin.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.