You might have heard that COVID-19 vaccine trials are underway in Seattle.

What exactly is being tested? How much longer will these tests take? And when can we expect a vaccine against the novel coronavirus?

We chat with Benjamin Neuman, Ph.D., one of the world's experts on coronavirus, and Daniel Wrapp, one of the scientists who mapped the structure of the protein that the coronavirus uses to infect your cells, to help us answer these questions:
