

Video: Mapping the radio sky

April 16 2021

Credit: CC0 Public Domain

The Very Large Array can't image a big section of sky all at once. Instead, it must scan the sky over time.

The VLA Sky Survey is using this method to create a map of nearly 80% of the observable sky.

Host Summer Ash of the National Radio Astronomy Observatory talks about how the VLA is taking the time to see the big picture of the radio sky.

Provided by National Radio Astronomy Observatory (NRAO)

Citation: Video: Mapping the radio sky (2021, April 16) retrieved 2 May 2024 from <https://phys.org/news/2021-04-video-radio-sky.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.
--