

Hundreds in Seattle rally against fossil fuel use

25 September 2011

rewritten or redistributed.

Egyptian cyclists take part in the "Moving Planet" day in Cairo, Egypt, Friday, Sept. 23, 2011. The day billed as "a day to move beyond fossil fuels", is a rally happening in 150 countries all over the world on 23 and 24 September. (AP Photo/Amr Nabil)

(AP) -- A few hundred people in Seattle have joined citizens around the globe in rallying against fossil fuel use and in support of alternative means of transportation.

Some of the demonstrators arrived by bicycle, paddleboard and foot for the rally Saturday at Lake Union Park. Mayor Mike McGinn was one of those who showed up on bike.

He told the crowd that governments in the U.S. have been spending too much on highways and too little on public transit.

Organizers say people in 700 U.S. cities took part in the rallies, including Bellingham and Olympia, as well as Portland, Ore., and Anchorage, Alaska.

In Colorado, a group of cyclists are riding 37 miles from Boulder to Denver to call for solutions to climate change.

©2011 The Associated Press. All rights reserved.
This material may not be published, broadcast,

APA citation: Hundreds in Seattle rally against fossil fuel use (2011, September 25) retrieved 27 November 2022 from <https://phys.org/news/2011-09-hundreds-seattle-rally-fossil-fuel.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.