

Interest in 1940 US census paralyzes website

2 April 2012

(AP) -- Interest in the newly released 1940 U.S. census is so great that the government website with the information is nearly paralyzed.

Miriam Kleiman (KLEYE'-man), a spokeswoman for the U.S. National Archives, told The Associated Press that the site registered more than 22 million hits in just four hours on Monday, from almost 2 million users.

The government released the records for the first time after 72 years of confidentiality expired.

It's the largest collection of digital information ever released by the National Archives. The records allow individuals and families to learn details about their past.

Computer experts are working on the site to bring it up to speed as soon as possible.

More than 21 million people still alive in the U.S. and Puerto Rico were counted in the 1940 census.

©2012 The Associated Press. All rights reserved.

This material may not be published, broadcast, rewritten or redistributed.

APA citation: Interest in 1940 US census paralyzes website (2012, April 2) retrieved 16 September 2019 from <https://phys.org/news/2012-04-census-paralyzes-website.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.