

Nobel Peace Prize to be announced in Oslo

12 October 2012

(AP)—After vetting candidates for seven months, the Norwegian judges for the Nobel Peace Prize will reveal the winner of the coveted award on Friday, capping a week of Nobel Prize announcements.

The secretive panel hasn't released any hints, and speculation this year is pointing in many different directions, without any clear favorite.

Online betting sites are giving the lowest odds to Russian human rights groups, Afghan women's rights activist Sima Samar and Gene Sharp, a U.S. scholar whose writings on nonviolent resistance have influenced pro-democracy movements in the Arab world and elsewhere.

The 2012 Nobel Prizes in medicine, physics, chemistry and literature have already been announced. The economics prize, which is not an original Nobel but was created by the Swedish central bank, will be announced on Monday.

Copyright 2012 The Associated Press. All rights reserved. This material may not be published, broadcast, rewritten or redistributed.

APA citation: Nobel Peace Prize to be announced in Oslo (2012, October 12) retrieved 17 May 2021 from <https://phys.org/news/2012-10-nobel-peace-prize-oslo.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.