

Panasonic quarterly profit soars more than 50% on tax change

29 July 2015

A woman displays Panasonic's new large tablet "Toughpad 4K" in Tokyo on June 23, 2015 and car navigation systems.

A weaker yen has made Japanese exporters relatively more competitive overseas and inflated the value of repatriated overseas profits.

For the current fiscal year, which started in April, Panasonic kept its forecast for a 180 billion yen net profit on revenue of 8.0 trillion yen.

© 2015 AFP

Japanese electronics giant Panasonic said Wednesday that its net profit soared 57 percent from a year ago, mainly thanks to a tax accounting change as it reshapes its business.

The Osaka-based firm's earnings for the three months to June surged to 59.52 billion yen ($482 million), while operating profit edged down seven percent to 76.56 billion yen.

Sales were almost flat at 1.86 trillion yen from a year ago.

The upbeat net profit was also supported by Panasonic's lesser-known auto parts unit.

The segment profit grew 35 percent from the same period last year "due mainly to rationalisation in materials, fixed-cost reductions and the positive impact of exchange rate fluctuation", the company said in a statement.

Panasonic's auto division makes various products found in vehicles, including electrical components

APA citation: Panasonic quarterly profit soars more than 50% on tax change (2015, July 29) retrieved 21 September 2021 from <https://phys.org/news/2015-07-panasonic-quarterly-profit-soars-tax.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.