

NFL's Amazon deal could be test for more streaming games

27 September 2017, by Josh Dubow

Amazon begins its foray into live streaming of NFL games Thursday night when it will air a matchup between the Chicago Bears and Green Bay Packers on its Prime Video service.

It's another option to the traditional broadcasts on CBS and the NFL Network. Amazon will stream 10 Thursday night games and one Christmas game this season, and the success of those transmissions could determine how quickly the NFL is ready to offer one of its packages exclusively to a streaming company.

The NFL's Thursday night package is being carried jointly by CBS, NBC, the NFL Network and Amazon this year, but the 2018 package will soon be up for bid. There could be substantial interest from companies like Twitter—which aired Thursday night games last year—Amazon, and potentially other tech behemoths like Google, Apple or Facebook.

© 2017 The Associated Press. All rights reserved.

APA citation: NFL's Amazon deal could be test for more streaming games (2017, September 27) retrieved 20 April 2021 from <https://phys.org/news/2017-09-nfl-amazon-streaming-games.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.